have but is help seither the golden apleador of the realm of Neivochahresar, nor the humans bountifulness of the promised dominion of the perspect. We camed wonder that our suther feels a surange relief in turning to the thoughts and life of a people in whose minds the simple principles of human life are contending or working more freely. And we can understead the aschose with which he says in the close of the asmo work: "To past from the study of Homer to the ordinary husbess of the world is to step out of a palace of enchantments into the cold gray light of a polar day."

We may sympathize with the man who is compelled to lake his place in Earl Russell's Cablinetted to the the control of the Chympie gods to take his place in Earl Russell's Cablinetted to lave the saffarr of Troy to those of Jamaics. It is happy to be permitted to look at these great providential plans in history from a point at which we can rejoles and can even take part in the increasing forcies of their fulfilment.

The constitutions of the Divine prerogative which belongs to man as man, was not peculiar to the ancient Greeks. It was in all the race of Japheth. The old Germans kept its spirit more pure in their gratems of public and private life. But the Greeks embodied it in forms of thought and art, by which it becomes an education for the presont and the coming world.

The great idea of the native worth of man. The petitions of Frant Seidel, W. B. Peabodt and George B. They have tried sharily everything in Blacks, without success, and are now falling back upon vaccination as the gain preventive, allogather despairing of finding a cure when once the beast is attacked. There are many complaints, however, in this country, against what is called "the last theory," manely, that risdepped and seriols are one and the same; and we are asked for the resons of cattle taking the disease after they had been thoroughly vaccinated. When Dr. Minchison and others farst started their "idea," our agricultural classes and the medical profused, with but few exceptions, seized upon the theory at the ark of their sattly, and the consequence followed, quite naturally, that THE FREEDMEN'S BUREAU Hertared to Committee on Streets and Alleys, S. The pian of vereek education was to turn saide from the precent to a past, which their imagination pictured as all glowing with heroism. It was a grand and imposing, but it was hardly an imaging education, because it engagested regret rather than hope. In this respect Mr. Gladstone is to much a Greek, If the had been she to admire, as he icoked seroes the sea, not the false daring of Jefferson Daris but the true soul of Abrahem Lincoln, if he could have paience of the usual order of condimisation attached to each.
